

THE HALLIDAY REVIEW

Summer
1998

THE HALLIDAY REVIEW

HIERARCHY◊ART◊RELIGION◊PHILOSOPHY◊SCIENCE

Volume 1 Number 4

Summer 1998

EDITORIAL

It has been a busy time! Few of the items I mentioned in the last edition of THR have as yet come to fruition, but though gestation may be slow, birth will come! And here is another birth to anticipate; the first volume of Christian Philosophy by Eugene Halliday will go to the printers very soon, and should be ready by late summer. We will let send out order forms by post nearer the time.

Many of you have said how much you enjoyed the Success series by EH. That has now ended, but I hope that you will find the varied pieces by EH in this edition a good alternative.

Summer is a coming in as I write, and this means generally a slackening of output as people seek sea and sand. I have a feeling that this desk will remain busy! And the Tabley Talks will begin again in the autumn; another Halliday Review will be due, and several other projects will be addressed. Meantime, have happy Holydays!

The Editor

Our frontispiece this time is a psychographic portrait by Eugene Halliday. It has no apparent title, but something like "Christ in Majesty" suggests itself. Copies are available on request, price Four Pounds. Printed on antique cream paper 14" x 9.75"

Contents

Frontispiece	1.
Editorial	2
Expansion	2
Defence of the Devil by D. Mahlowe	9
Lucifer/Satan	10
Three Brains	12
Poetry Please	12
Symbology	14
Definitions	15
Your Letters	17
Sexual Reproduction	18
Absolute & Determinism	19
Faithful in Little	22
Definition	22
Notes	23

EXPANSION

by Eugene Halliday

To expand consciousness is to approach more nearly to God. It is to become aware of the One Power which is the source of all powers. For this one must change. But change is difficult for it belongs to a double process: (1) leaving the familiar; (2) entering into the unfamiliar.

The familiar is the little self we already know; the larger self is one we do not yet know; the largest self is God.

At first we may need a concept by which to anchor the consciousness we already know so as not to lose ourself in the illimitable void. For this we may at first have to turn to some creed, or embrace some ritual procedure. Gradually we may disclose for ourself what we seek — the totally expanded self — God.